- Student of the of International Management/General Management English master's program at EUBA

I was never kind of person, who was brave enough to think seriously about life abroad even if I liked travelling much. Everything changed much after my exchange program in Poland, when I, inspired by the great half of a year adventure, decided to apply to EUBA for the International Management master's study program in English because of several reasons. I am still on the half of my way, so I cannot say yet, if it change my future so much, like I am expecting. I will also not be lying, that life here is always so easy and pleasant for me. But what I can say for sure is that this kind of experience in practicing my language, gaining new relations, developing myself, obtaining new knowledge I would not be able to get anywhere, except of this program. I am thankful much to all people, who is teaching me and who is studying with me, who became my second family.

If you are ready to exciting challenges and to comprehensive development of yourself – then this program is definitely for you!

- Studying at “International/General Management” in English, EUBA
- Holder of Erasmus scholarship for academic year 2015/2016 - Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore (Milano)

Besides the possibility to attend and participate in lectures run by one of the most prominent professionals in the country in the field of economics, the greatest advantages of studying at EUBA comes from the ability to connect with a large number of intelligent and capable colleagues and establish permanent contact. This also makes it easier to deal with obligations at university and leaves more space for better social life. In this way you will know that whatever you're doing - you're not alone.

Don't forget that student days are made of everything which cannot be seen nor noticed easily - smiles, socializing, jitters before the examination and celebration after the exam, sincere compliments and well-intentioned criticism, noise and silence in student restaurant. And chances. The chances of entering business world and gaining experience will be all around you. It takes a little effort and desire and you will be able to work for or with professionals from most outstanding companies in the world. Additionally you will have many chances to travel, learn, go to student exchange, meet amazing people, network, improve yourself and represent your country in the best way possible. Just stop and look around, chances are there.

- Student of International/General Management English Master's program at EUBA
- Currently involved at VÚB bank Student Internship
- Going to Rennes (France) for Erasmus+ Internship for Summer period 2015 to work as an Project Coordinator Assistant
- Nominee for the double degree study at the EM Strasbourg (Business School) - France

I have subscribed for International Management program because I wanted the better quality of education, the more interactions with the professors and of course to improve my business English. After the first year of study I can say the programme gave me all of this and that's not all. In addition there is a great group of people including international students from different countries so this can help me to understand better how the business works in many other countries as well. This fact enables us to share varied experiences and perspectives as well as learn more effectively how to work and deal with the people from different cultures. It was also much easier for me to find an internship abroad as my language competence improved a lot and being part of this active group of students motivates me to be more active and involved as well.

I have much wider view on the different sides of business as this programme offers a cross-disciplinary approach and allows us to gain both technical and managerial knowledge. Solving the business cases on a regular basis stimulate me to critical thinking and coming up with new ideas. I also improved my interpersonal skills a lot as we were working in teams very often and needed to cooperate and rely on each other.

- Student of of IM/GM English Master's program
- Currently enrolled in Slovak Business Agency Student Internship
  - Accepted to Riga BA School of Business and Finance in Riga (Latvia) for Erasmus + Summer 2015 Internship as an Assistant Project Manager

The reason why I decided to apply for International/General Management though in English was simple – I wanted to study what I like but in a different language. After almost one year I can say that I made a good choice. The fact that we are only 16 in a group gives all of us an opportunity to have open lessons with a huge space for various discussions where each opinion is welcomed. Moreover, the good atmosphere and friendly relationships help us to express ourselves without any fear, by preparing various presentations we are learning how to stand confidently and present our ideas in front of the whole class. Our work is many times based on daily assignments where we work in teams consist of people from different countries which help us to gain new insights for solved tasks. As you can see, this is really good way how you can practise your interpersonal and managerial skills, how to think critically and actually step by step it helps us to become professionals in our real lives.

All of my classmates are strong, vision-driven personalities, doing internships in multinational companies and I just don't want to stand behind them – this motivates me a lot to work harder and this is why we are different. If you want to achieve success, find a well-paid job in the future and thanks to that fulfil your dreams do not hesitate to join International/General Management programme at EUBA

- Student of IM/GM English Master's program
- Currently enrolled in Finance Internship Program at Dell
- Holder of Erasmus scholarship for academic year 2015/ 2016, going to EM Strasbourg Business School (France)

My first intention why I decided to study this program was the reason that it is taught in English. I think that it always makes a difference when you study in foreign language. You will be more prepared for international environment at work and you will be used to business English. I definitely think so as I use it at my internship at Dell.

Secondly, I find interesting to be in every day contact with foreign classmates from all over the world. You will be more engaged in problematic or benefits of foreign countries if representatives of those countries speak to you directly. Thanks to this international environment, classes are more interactive as each student representing its country can say example at courses such as International Business, European Union or International Business and Managements.

Finally, this studying program provides you with opportunities to study abroad that enrich your gained knowledge even more deeply. I was chosen for double diploma study to UNISTRA and I am really thankful to this opportunity.

Bc. Terézia Ligačová, Slovakia

- Student of IM/GM in English Master program at EUBA

During my 2nd year of bachelor study I have been for one semester on Erasmus in France studying most of the subjects in English. When I return back to Slovakia, I wanted to continue studying in English and be a part of an international environment but to stay in Slovakia.

Therefore I decided to study International Management in English at the University of Economics in Bratislava as a master programme.

There are more aspects that I like about this programme. We are an international group as we have several classmates from foreign countries and it makes the class environment more diversified, multicultural and vivid. My classmates want to gain more than just a degree and they encourage me to work on myself.

The lessons are more interactive than I was used to during my bachelor study in Slovak language. We are invited to express our opinions, our ideas and to participate in a discussion.

I miss more foreign teachers as most of those who teach us are Slovaks but they try to make the lessons international – with case studies from international companies showing us the real business problems and situations, with excursions to national and multinational companies, with their own experiences from business life.

I believe that studying International/General Management in English helps me improve my business English and will prepare me for my professional future. I recommend this programme to all those who aren't afraid of changes and new things and to those who want to diversify from the great mass of graduates.
